This Week's Corns

Will be Gone Next Week—250,000 of Them

This week, 250,000 corns will be removed with Blue-jay. So every week. This invention now is ending a million corns a month.

Think of that—you who pare corns, you who daub them, you who still use ancient methods.

Apply a Blue-jay plaster and the pain will end at once. In two days take the plaster off. The corn will be loosened. Simply lift it out. There'll be no pain or soreness.

You will never feel that corn again. Others may come if you still pinch your feet. But that corn is ended forever. You can prove this with one plaster, in two days.

A in the picture is the soft B & B wax. It loosens the corn.
B stops the pain and keeps the wax from spreading.
C wraps around the toe. It is narrowed to be comfortable.
D is rubber adhesive to fasten the plaster on.

Blue-jay Corn Plasters

SANITARY orderliness in the bathroom eliminates everything not absolutely essential. The built-in medicine chest holds all the small bottles and toilet necessities while the moulding above the wainscot has enough width to carry larger articles. The shelves hold reserve towels always at hand. The laundry chute is a great convenience and the tiny partition chute for old safety razor blades will certainly appeal to the modern man. Nickel accessories and a white enamel stool, added to the necessary fixtures, would complete the bathroom's furnishings. A shower bath attachment at the head of the tub would leave nothing to be desired save a bathmat of harmonious pale green and white.

The upper bathroom in white and nickel boasts also the laundry chute, all the necessary fixtures and a great deal of fresh air and light. The rug here should be delft blue and white.

The servants' bathroom in the cellar of the Ideal Home is a very desirable feature. The fixtures are plain and of the best quality. There need be no great outlay in connection with this room as it is more than likely to be appreciated by only half the average run of domestics.

A word about the care and cleaning of bathroom fixtures. When they are first installed see that they are well protected from the vandalism of the careless workman. Painters will set their paint buckets in the tub, tools will be stored there and planks will be laid across it to furnish a scaffold for the decorator, if you are not vigilant. Preserve the fine glossy finish from roughening and your intelligent care will be rewarded by lengthened service. With ordinary attention this surface will last a lifetime. Beware of sharp or pointed instruments, gritty powders or common scouring soaps to remove stains. "Porcelina" is advised for cleaning all porcelain enameled fixtures. It is prepared for the purpose and will remove any stain that is possible of elimination. Strong acids should be avoided as these are liable to eat into the enamel and destroy its smoothness.

You can buy any number of interesting nickel fixtures, sponge racks and shampoo attachments, soap dishes, towel-racks, glass racks and bath seats, also glass shelves and rods, all of which go far toward making your bathroom more complete. Beware of over furnishing, however, and have only appliances necessary to the sanitary equipment of the room.

The selection and arrangement of the plumbing has received strictest attention in the plans and specifications of The Ideal Home. Inferior plumbing is not for a moment considered. There is nothing which gives more satisfaction to the housewife than fixtures that are handsome and sanitary, and which always retain their good qualities. From an investment point of view the selection of the best is an economy, in that it enhances the value of your property, and in case of sale brings back its extra cost long after it has paid for itself in gratification.

The Ideal Bathrooms are located one above the other with economy in view, keeping all the piping as nearly as possible in one portion of the house. They are directly accessible from the bedrooms and cut off from all the other rooms; out of sight and out of hearing. They are well lighted and ventilated, not only by the sanitary system employed, but by the casement windows which allow the greatest amount of light and air to enter.

If extra decoration is desired, stencil borders may be applied to the walls just above the wainscot. The stencil should be carried out in the prevailing color scheme of the room. This addition would cost but a slight sum and would give a finish to the rooms not absolutely essential but greatly admired by many. A pattern of flying seagulls for the owner's bathroom in grey, green and white, has a cool suggestion of wind whipped seas and the salty exhilaration of your ocean dips.

Upstairs, little delft blue ships, sailing serenely above the wainscot all around the room, will give an attractive touch at once unusual and pleasing. These same motifs carried out in cross-stitch on the hand and bath towels in combination with the owner's initials, would show individuality.

The very best sort of mirror for this room would be one of heavy plate glass framed in nickel, either oblong or oval in shape, and hung flat against the wall. Place under it a glass shelf supported by nickel brackets, a nickel soap dish and towel bar of glass at the side and you will have a perfectly appointed lavatory.

Your bathroom floors should be carefully filled, stained, and oiled or waxed to make them as nearly waterproof as possible.

A light bathroom, easy to clean, as compact as you please and not overloaded with unessentials—is an Ideal Home requirement.
